Fresenius Kabi: US Generic IV Drug Market in FY/19

2019 pricing environment expected to be in line with recent years

- Key molecules to see more competition, however broadly unchanged pricing environment in large base business
- Healthy volume growth projected to more than offset price decline
- Continued low single-digit price decline for core portfolio anticipated in 2019

Excellent competitive position - strong customer relationships and pipeline

- FDA accelerated approvals of generics – especially for drugs with limited number of approvals
- Excellent customer relationships and strong pipeline mitigate risk
- Similar level of launches expected as in FY/18

Helios Germany: Improved visibility

Active management of regulatory challenges by adjusting structures

- Clustering (to fulfill minimum number of indications)
- Setting up regional centers
- Increased regional cooperation between clinics

Being attractive for nurses

- Central, regional and local recruiting measures
- Impact of minimum staffing levels on FY/19 financials benign
- "Pflegetarifvertrag" – collective bargaining for nurses

Profit from trend towards outpatient services

- Attractive network of ~125 MVZs (polyclinics)
- Leverage and scaling of outpatient services

New business models

- Develop internationally scalable business models
- New business areas for Germany (e.g. video consulting, occupational health)
- Digitization for comprehensive cross-sector care

DRG change from 2020 onwards

- We expect that the impact on FY/20 financials is manageable

Helios Spain: Continued dynamic growth
